

Grant Opportunities & News You Can Use

Hello, faculty,

We are back with our March Grant Opportunities newsletter! We have a few announcements, so let’s jump in.

First, our office hours will be back on Zoom this Friday, April 7th! Drop by (virtually) any time from 10-11 to ask us questions, pitch a project, or just say hi.

You can find us here:

This month we have a Featured Funder column introducing you to some curricular grants from the NEH. For Sage Advice, we have a column all about summer salary. For The History of American Philanthropy, we are looking at an early leader within the Russell Sage Foundation on labor rights, Mary van Kleeck.

We have news stories and brief thumbnails of opportunities coming due in April. And in the back, we have six months’ worth of deadlines. (As always, check the website! Some of the later deadlines have not yet been released.) The final internal grant deadline for 2022-2023 was March 21st. We’ll keep you posted when new ones come out next year.

That’s it for us! Don’t hesitate to reach out if you’re in need of funding, someone to review your applications, help building a budget, advice on managing a grant, or just want to chat.

We’re here to help!

Featured Funders

Funding from the NEH for Curricular Projects

Mostly, when we choose to highlight a funder in this column, we tend to focus on opportunities meant to support your individual research, whether in a lab or library. But what if you're a little further along in your career and what really interests you right now is the possibility of creating programmatic change? That could mean expanding a course into a program, adding a service learning or study abroad component to an existing course, or joining any of the existing, exciting movements in the College, like the effort to think about the role of sustainability in the campus curriculum. Today's opportunities from the NEH are meant for exactly that sort of case. Check them out!

The first opportunity is called "Humanities Initiatives" and its goal is to expand or develop new programs specifically in the humanities. Here's how the NEH describes it:

Humanities Initiatives strengthen the teaching and study of the humanities at institutions of higher education by developing new or enhancing existing programs, resources (including those in digital format), or courses that explore, interpret, and preserve the diversity of human cultures, ideas, and practices, past and present.

"Projects must address a core topic or set of themes drawn from humanities areas such as history, philosophy, religion, literature, or humanities-informed composition and writing skills. NEH welcomes applications for projects that are modest in scope, duration, and budget, as well as applications for expansive, long-term projects.

Funding: Up to $150,000. Deadline: May 9, 2023.

The second opportunity is really for humanities faculty specifically interested in building curricular ties with the sciences, social sciences, or pre-professional programs, and is called "Humanities Connections."

The Humanities Connections program seeks to expand the role of the humanities in undergraduate education at two- and four-year institutions. Awards support innovative curricular approaches that foster partnerships among humanities faculty and their counterparts in the social and natural sciences and in pre-service or professional programs (such as business, engineering, health sciences, law, computer science, and other technology-driven fields), in order to encourage and develop new integrative learning opportunities for students.

Humanities Connections projects must include:

- substantive and purposeful integration of the subject matter, perspectives, and pedagogical approaches of two or more disciplines (with a minimum of one in and one outside of the humanities)
- collaboration between faculty from two or more departments or schools at one or more institutions
- experiential learning as an intrinsic part of the proposed curriculum
- long-term institutional support for the proposed curriculum innovation(s).

Funding: Up to $35,000 for Planning; up to $150,000 for Implementation. Deadline: September 7, 2023.

Not sure if your discipline counts as a humanities discipline? Check out our old newsletter column on exactly this topic!

Sage Advice

Summer Salary: What it is, when to ask for it, and how to calculate it

Summer isn't far off, which means pool parties, vacations, article reviewing and...summer salary, if you're lucky. If you know all about summer salary, you can skip this article and get started on your pool party plans early. But for those of you who are only vaguely familiar with it or have frankly no idea what I'm talking about right now, read on.

Definition

Summer salary is meant to pay you for your time as you research during the summer. Summer salary is paid out in addition to your base pay during the academic year. It's not the same thing as a course release, because it doesn't have any impact on your teaching load.

How to calculate summer salary

Summer salary is fairly straightforward. Faculty are largely on nine-month contracts, even if your salary is paid out over twelve months. That leaves you with three months free to earn summer salary.

Summer salary is calculated based on one month of your normal salary - which would be 1/9th of your base salary, if you're on a nine-month contract. So if your base salary is $100,000/year (to pick an easy number), summer salary would be $11,111.11. You would receive that, minus taxes, on top of your normal monthly pay.

The catch? While you can technically ask for 3 months of summer salary, we recommend that you limit your requests to 2.5 months, at most, because by claiming to work all three months on a grant, you are promising that you won't do anything else during your summer—no class prep, no journal reviewing, no vacation, no sick days. The agency awarding the grant can ask for documentation that you really worked those hours. They might actually do it, too, because asking for 3 full months is something of a red flag.

You might be asking, why haven't I heard about this? Truthfully, it's just not that common if you're in a field that mostly funds scholars with fellowships. Fellowships tend to buy out your time through salary replacement. Summer salary is much more common in the sciences and is commonly supported by federal agencies such as the National Science Foundation and National Institutes of Health.

The biggest exceptions, if you're a humanist or humanistically-inclined social scientist tend to be the National Endowment for the Humanities, specifically for grant-funded projects, like the new opportunity, “the Dangers and Promises of Technology,” or institutionally-funded projects, like the Mellon Foundation's Barnard Engages.

Next issue, we'll pick up with the topic of course releases—what they are, how to calculate them, and who to ask.

In the meanwhile, don't hesitate to reach out to our office if you have any questions.

The History of American Philanthropy

We spoke last issue about Olivia Slocum Sage’s role in establishing the Russell Sage Foundation and her conviction that women had a role to play in establishing a new, more rigorous form of philanthropy. This issue, I want to turn to one of the reformers at the heart of the Russell Sage Foundation in those early years: Mary van Kleeck.

Mary van Kleeck was born in 1883 in Glenham, New York, as the youngest of five children. Her father was an Episcopal priest who died when she was only nine years old. From a relatively early age, she was committed to women’s causes, noting in her speech as high school valedictorian that:

We are living in an age of disputes, and by no means the least among them is the question of woman and her rights ... [those who defend women] make one great mistake—they bravely defend woman, but they forget that she needs no defense, they eloquently plead her release from the bonds of slavery, but they forget that she is not a slave.

After high school, Van Kleeck went on to get a bachelor’s degree from Smith and then a fellowship that allowed her to research whether employers actually obeyed the labor laws limiting work to 60 hours a week in the state of New York. (Reader, they did not.) Van Kleeck continued to work in the burgeoning field of social work and labor rights, investigating the working conditions of women in the millinery trade and doing graduate work at Columbia University in social economy.

Then, in 1910, she was hired by the Russell Sage Foundation as leader of its Committee on Women’s Work. The Foundation published a number of books based on her research, including Artificial Flower Makers (1913), Women in the Bookbinding Trade (1913), and Wages in the Millinery Trade (1914). In 1916, she successfully lobbied the foundation to create a “Division of Industrial Studies” and appoint her its head. Under her direction, the Division made numerous recommendations for legal improvements for the conditions of workers. Occasionally, the investigations her department launched prompted backlash from corporations accused of labor violations, but the Foundation supported her.

In 1917, she was selected by Woodrow Wilson to head a sub-agency of the Department of Labor, called “The Women in Industry Service Group.” During her time there, she made numerous recommendations about how to improve the wage gap for women and their working conditions, most of which were declined. Her department did, however, create at least one influential report, which became the basis nearly twenty years later for 1938’s Fair Labor Standards Act, a national law guaranteeing minimum wage and overtime for work over forty hours per week.

After the war, she returned to the Russell Sage Foundation, continuing to publish study after study. As the twenties and thirties rolled on, her politics became increasingly radical. She began identifying as a socialist in public and criticized the New Deal under Franklin Roosevelt, believing that Soviet-style government was the only viable alternative to capitalism.

In 1948, she retired with her long-time partner, Mary “Mikie” Fleddérus. (Unfortunately, I haven’t been able to find much about her.) Her retirement wasn’t entirely peaceful, though. As McCarthyism gained power, Van Kleeck found herself under investigation for Communist sympathies. There’s no proof she ever formally joined the party, but when questioned, she wasn’t particularly shy about voicing her feelings about capitalism. When asked in 1953 in a Senate investigation whether she “was a believer in the capitalist form of government?” she responded, “Is the United States essentially and forever capitalist? It has changed its form of organization through the years. I am a believer in political democracy, which is the essence of the United States of America.”

I want to leave Mary van Kleeck there as one example of the uncomfortable relationship between public activism, private philanthropy, government issues, and capitalism that prevailed during the first half of the twentieth century.

Gerda Henkel Stiftung

Grants

Deadline: May 17, 2023

"Depending on the type of project, research projects are funded by covering personnel, travel, material and/or other costs. For project staff working on research projects, only doctoral or research grants can be applied for. The basic prerequisite for funding is that project staff carry out their own research work, which is published under their name. It is not possible to receive a scholarship and salary or an old-age pension at the same time. The sponsorship period for doctoral and research fellows of the Foundation can be extended by up to twelve months if a child is born during the fellowship period and there is an entitlement to maternity leave or parental leave. Please coordinate individual regulations with the office." <<link>>

Andy Warhol Foundation

Andy Warhol Foundation Arts Writers Grant

Deadline: May 17, 2023

"The Andy Warhol Foundation Arts Writers Grant is pleased to announce its 2022 grantees. The program supports writing about contemporary art and aims to ensure that critical writing remains a valued mode of engaging with the visual arts. In its 2022 cycle the Arts Writers Grant has awarded a total of $695,000 to 20 writers. Ranging from $15,000 to $50,000 in three categories—Articles, Books, and Short-Form Writing—these grants support projects addressing both general and specialized art audiences, from short reviews for magazines and newspapers to in-depth scholarly studies." SOCIAL SCIENCES

Wenner-Gren

Fejos Postdoctoral Fellowship in Ethnographic Film

Deadline: May 1, 2023

"Early-career scholars frequently lack the time and resources needed for film production. Through this program, we support projects that will impact the field of anthropology and beyond through innovative work in film and other media. The Foundation has no preference for any methodology, research location, or subfield. We encourage the use of novel production strategies in terms of technique, process, approach, and the integration of film and video with other media suitable to anthropology. We encourage new solutions to the challenge of ethically representing diverse communities—for instance, by seeking their permission through public forums, guaranteeing their right to the materials produced, and releasing copyrights to them."

Hunt Postdoctoral Fellowship

Deadline: May 1, 2023

"Recent PhDs in anthropology and related fields frequently lack the time and resources to publish their work. But their research is often the source of the discipline's most exciting new ideas. This program supports emerging scholars whose work has the potential to transform our understanding of what it means to be human." <<link>>

Wenner-Gren

Post-PhD Research Grant

Deadline: May 1, 2023

"This grant program funds individual research projects undertaken by doctorates in anthropology or a closely related field. Our goal is to support vibrant and significant work that furthers our understanding of what it means to be human. There is no preference for any methodology, research location, topic, or subfield. The Foundation particularly welcomes proposals that integrate two or more subfields and pioneer new approaches and ideas." <<link>>

Russell Sage Foundation

Future of Work

Deadline: May 3, 2023

"The Russell Sage Foundation's program on the Future of Work supports innovative research on the causes and consequences of changes in the quality of jobs for low- and moderately paid workers and their families in the U.S. We seek investigator-initiated research proposals that will broaden our understanding of the role of changes in employer practices, the nature of the labor market and public policies on employment, earnings, and job quality. We are especially interested in proposals that address questions about the interplay of market and non-market forces in shaping the wellbeing of workers."

Deadline: May 15, 2023

"The Kennan Institute seeks applications from scholars who have received their Ph.D. within the past 10 years for the James H. Billington Fellowship to conduct research on Russian history and culture. The Billington Fellowship was established in 2016 in tribute to the co-founder of the Kennan Institute, former Director of the Wilson Center, and former Librarian of Congress, James H. Billington. Dr. Billington made enduring contributions to the field of Russian Studies, and in our nation's ability to understand and maintain bridges of dialogue with the Russian people. He was not only the author of The Icon and the Axe (1966), Fire in the Minds of Men (1980), and Russia in Search of Itself (2004), among other seminal works; he was the visionary behind the Open World Leadership Center, which has facilitated the travel of over 24,000 individuals from Eurasia to the United States to meet with members of Congress and visit across the United States."
